Dialysis services not being managed for efficiency: Auditor General

WINNIPEG – The Province of Manitoba is not managing dialysis services in a manner that promotes efficiency, says Auditor General Tyson Shtykalo, who today released his audit report, Management of Dialysis Services.

“Even though dialysis is a life-sustaining service, the Province does not know if it is achieving the best results for patients and providing the best value for taxpayers,” Shtykalo said.

The audit found:

- There is no operational planning for dialysis services, which is needed to turn strategic goals into actions.
- Responsibilities for dialysis are unclear, leading to uncertainty and contributing to inefficiencies.
- The funding model for dialysis services is not tied to outcomes or cost analysis, which does not encourage smarter use of resources.

Manitoba has the highest rate of end-stage kidney disease in Canada, and the number of patients requiring dialysis continues to rise.

The report includes six recommendations to improve how dialysis services are managed in Manitoba.
